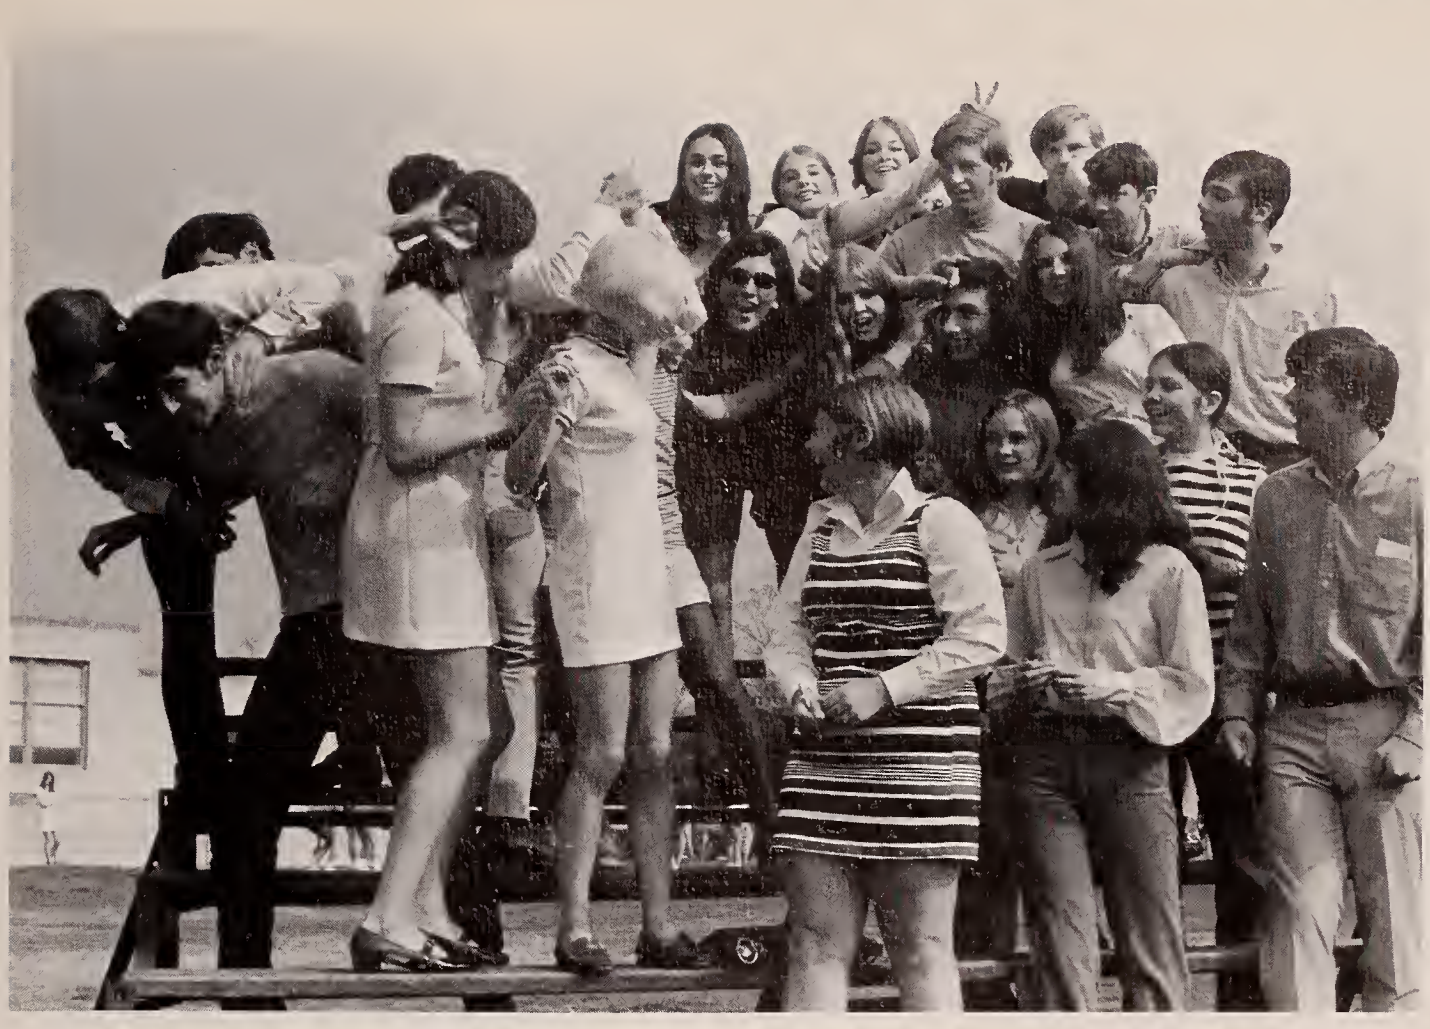
COULD YOU IMAGINE?



. . . the senior class without its clowns?

. . . Karen Pyne as a doctor?

. . . going through high school again?

. . . a world without hunger, death, sorrow, and hatred?

. . . Terry Silvers without a briefcase?

. . . Jane's car at 7:30 or 2:15?

. . . Janice McLean 80 lbs. heavier?

. . . if the teachers didn't give homework?

. . . no morning exercises?

. . . Mr. D. in a jacket and tie?

. . . Mr. Cripps having formal instead of informal classes?

. . . Mr. Kelley giving a study?

. . . Mr. Garrett wearing a long tie?

. . . Richard Wagstaff driving a Rolls Royce?

. . . the surfers with broken surfboards?

. . . clean lockers?

. . . a full parking lot at 8:15 and 2:30?

VALEDICTORY

Most of today's youth disagree with their parents on everything from hair styles to student demonstrations. This conflict has been termed the Generation Gap. However, the term, generation gap, is no longer and probably never has been applicable to the parent-youth situation. Not only is the term much too general, but it concludes that there is no solution to the problem. There has always existed an age gap between parents and their children, but never before has there been as much friction between them as there is today. This friction isn't the result of a generation gap. Rather, it is the result of a lack of understanding between both parties.

Parents can't understand why youth doesn't accept what adults say without question. Youth can't understand why their questioning is answered with, "Because I said so." Most of our parents grew up in an atmosphere of parental supremacy. They were taught to obey their parents without question. Parents were always right and knew what was best for all. A grandparent was usually around to carry on their teaching of past generations. But today, this no longer holds true. Most grandparents now live in senior citizen homes. For the first time, youth has a chance to think about things and develop opinions rather than blindly accepting those of their parents. Why shouldn't they be able to question! One can only learn by questioing those things which are not understood. Why must parents always be right! Parents are just as human as everyone else, thus, capable of making mistakes. Their views on various issues could be based on old facts that have since changed. What was best to do when they were young may no longer hold true.

In courtrooms, both parties are given a chance to present their case. This is what the youth of today want—a chance to tell their point of view. Understanding can only be accomplished if both parties are given the opportunity to express their opinion, and, most important of all, if both parties listen to each other's opinion. Hearing is one thing; listening is another.

The youth of today aren't revolutionaries. They are just trying to make themselves heard. Often demonstrations are the only means of getting people to listen. Students don't want power. They just want to be given more say in running their own lives. The following statement appeared in the magazine, American Youth: "There exists today, the basic conflict of youth trying to live an independent life while still seeking parental support and guidance to fall back on." The key word of the entire statement is guidance. There as a great difference between ruling and guiding. A person can't be expected to mature unless he is given the added responsibilities that accompany adulthood. It is also true, though, that the person must be guided in the right direction as he matures. A baby can't be expected to learn how to walk if he is always carried. But it is also true that while the baby is learning to walk, he must be guided by the hand.

There have been many changes at W.H.S. this past year. One important change was the abolishment of the dress code. This gave students the responsibility and freedom of wearing the clothing and hair styles of their choice. But more changes are necessary. Student-teacher committees should be appointed to decide on new courses that would appeal to students and also prepare them to deal with our world today. School should be a place where students learn to express their own ideas, not accept other people's ideas as their own. Everyone has to develop his own values in life. No one can just adopt his teacher's values. This can only be accomplished if courses are changed in such a way that students become really involved.

Understanding is necessary for these changes. Our generation will make the world that our children will live in. Will they then face the same situation we face today? Not if both generations understand that changes are necessary as time goes on. A person will try to understand others only if those around him try to understand him.

CAROLYN COSMAN

SALUTATORY

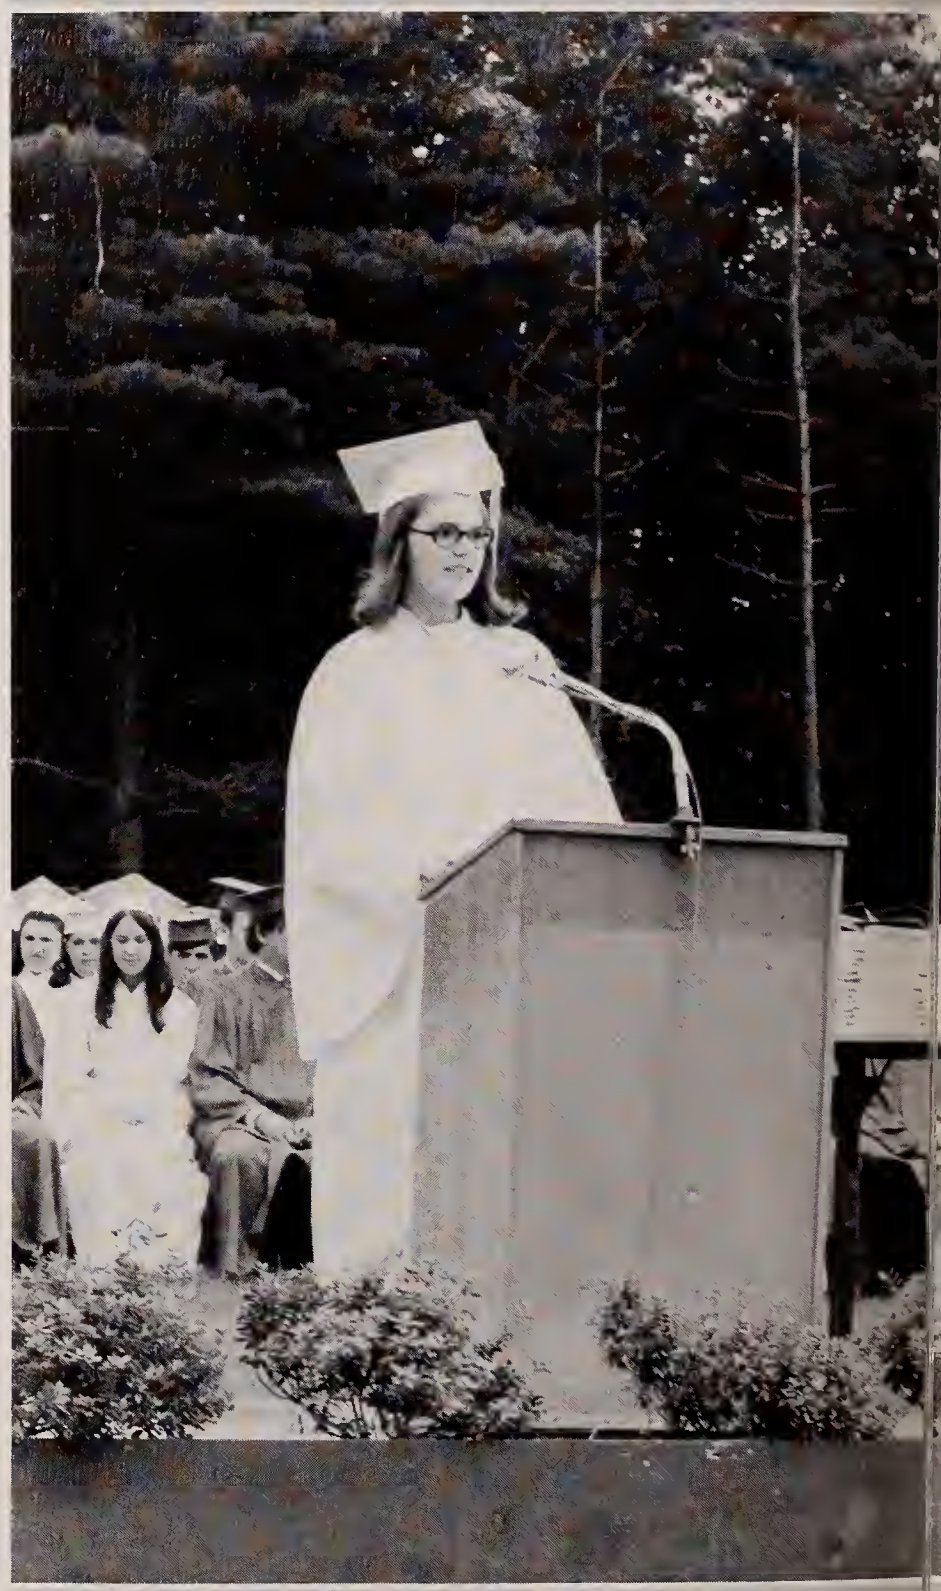
For some, today's ceremony will be the conclusion of formal education; for others, the conclusion of twelve years of preparation for further education. During these years, we as students have been prompted in every direction to accept all of the knowledge we can. Finally the day arrives; we are handed our diplomas and sent out into the world. Here, the challenge of life begins, to see how effectively we can put to use the knowledge we have acquired.

Each generation comes to a time when it is in the majority. As men and women making up the majority one day, we will formulate the world that mankind is to live in until the next generation. We face the time when we have to think of ourselves, making decisions—decisions that will pave the way for our future. There is so much emphasis put on "doing your own thing" at present. Tomorrow will be the proof of how well we think for ourselves.

There are some who fail under the strain of our fast moving society. There are many more, however, who will not fail. With faith in God they will not become discouraged or falter. "For faith is a force greater than knowledge, power, or skill."

The effectiveness of our knowledge and faith will be seen in the future—a future which is ours!

DEBORAH DAYTON



ESSAY

To many of the students here today happiness is the final and long awaited farewell to high school days, as they look forward to new horizons.

The Declaration of Independence says, ". . . that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

"Pursuit of happiness" is the key phrase here. Happiness must be looked for because it is not going to jump into a person's waiting arms. Each person must seek happiness in his own way, because Thoreau said, "Man is the artificer of his own happiness."

Some people are happy practicing their careers; others may not be happy working under poor conditions. So they seek happiness by striking and picketing. Demonstrations for peace may be an attempt by some people to seek happiness. Happiness may not be found, however, when it destroys things or interferes with the happiness of someone else.

To very small children happiness is playing with the Christmas wrapping paper not the presents. To other small children joy may come by not having to drink milk or eat spinach.

To Lucy, of the Peanuts characters, happiness is something to look forward to. Charlie Brown says happiness is having the bell ring just as you are called on to recite. And to Charlie Brown's sister happiness is having the pediatrician say, "No, I guess she won't need a shot."

Many people feel that personal happiness is created when helping others. In the large cities and even the small towns, people are too self-centered to be concerned with anyone but themselves—and helping others would be beyond them.

True happiness comes from within—it's a sort of satisfaction, and it does not depend on outward things or material possessions. When a person's sense of well-being depends on outside circumstances then he is in bad shape.

Happiness should be treated like a muscle—it needs exercise. Like an unexercised body that becomes fat, uncomfortable, and unhealthy, an unexercised smile becomes stiff and sour. "A merry heart maketh for a cheerful countenance." The exercise of happiness requires life's full participation. The pursuit may not always be sweet or delightful, but as long as we are aware of its purpose the bad times become easy to bear and the exercise will be rewarding.

Walt Whitman said this in his "Song of Myself":

> There is that in me—I do not know what it is—but I know it is in me. . . .
> Something it swings on more that the earth I swing on.
> To it the creation is the friend whose embracing awakes me. . . .
> It is not chaos or death—it is form, union, plan—it is eternal fire—it is happiness.

There are many ingredients to happiness. Some of them are contentment, good acts, clear conscience, friends, a cheerful heart, good health, freedom, courage, tranquility of mind, faith and hope.

Happiness is much more than comfort, enjoyment or satisfaction; it is a gladness that is overflowing. Each of us here will find, or will at least keep searching for, his complete happiness and contentment. We may not find it in an end result of something, but perhaps in the doing of it.

The grand essentials of happiness in this life are something to do, something to love, something to hope for, and something to beleive in. Seeking and sharing happiness are the world's greatest treasures.

JOAN MCQUAID

The morning of June 8, 1970, finds Mr. McMahon sitting in his office gleefully grinning at the thunderstorm raging outside. Strange, why is he so happy? Ah, yes, yesterday he pronounced the Class of '70 officially and legally dead. Now all that remains is the reading of their will, and their memories will join the others haunting the halls of the High School.

A huge, padlocked box is sitting in the middle of his office. With a peal of thunder and a flash of lightning accompanying him, Mr. McMahon unlocks it and cautiously raises the lid, not knowing what to expect. The memory of this class is too fresh in his mind.

The first thing to catch his attention is Billy Irwin's centerfold, left to Mr. Garrett. Next to that are a hot dog, a pea, and a dead pigeon that Dotty Castaldo leaves to Sue Landers. Looking further, he finds that: Robyn Rees leaves the M.B. to some needy junior girl; also, to her brother, Tom, notes on 1001 ways to make four years at W.H.S. go faster; Kathi and Janny leave their alligators to posterity; Charlotte McCain leaves her Chicago Fire to Patti Hodgdon and Patti Lawrenson, and her unfinished, mutilated mobile to Brenda Graves and Carl Cotter; Dotti Jewer leaves her first place in line to the runt of '71; Carol Cosman leaves ten fingers to all the short juniors so they can reach the top lockers.

Completely overwhelmed by the generosity of the class, Mr. McMahon is eager to see what else is hidden in the box.

A supply of pens and pencils is left to Jack Warford by Marie Curran, who also leaves a handshake and a kiss to Mike DeFilippo and Carl Capozzi. N.L., L.R. and G.B. leave a used pipe and a few black armbands to any upcoming revolutionaries. George Robertie leaves one slightly used reach clip to Robert Baker. Dale's gym socks are left to anyone who can get them white again. Tom Kenninson leaves his favorite picture of President Nixon to all underclassmen. Cathe Cone leaves the "Pole" to Susan Adams, pink and yellow polkadots to a certain senior boy, and her book by Stillman to Janis. Anne Blaisdell leaves a "Happy Cup" to Debbi Dayton. A false tooth is left by Kathy Ross to any toothless underclassman. The senior girls leave "Martha" to Sonja. Pat Gardner leaves her little red basket, and to Robyn her "wing." Justine leaves her "Support the Naturally Curly" card to all fuzzies. Tightly wrapped in a small box are the fidgies left by Gale and sister, Sydna, to any spastic in dire need.

Mr. McMahon, a little fearful now, pushes through the collection of senior valuables.

The cast of the Senior Class Play leaves the door to Harry Landers. Cathe Cone leaves "The Desk" to Sandy Dennis. A Dirty Old Lady suit is left by Janis to next year's Junior Variety Show. Janet, Cathe, Sydna and Justine leave their bells to a passing cow. Nancy leaves a package of Oreos and "The Title" to number 1 of the junior class. Bev Jacobs leaves to the underclassmen and school, her confidence, stability, and whatever she has that she doesn't want. Bruce MacInnis leaves Bill DeLisle and the rest of the groundhogs thirty pairs of knee pads.

Now Mr. McMahon's fears are justified. Pat Graves leaves Barb G. and others the job of cleaning the cigarette butts out of the vents and putting out the fires. Kathi, Carol, Syd and JOB leave a Snoopy thermos and an aspirin bottle of firewater. Janet Mather leaves her skirts to any worthy freshman. Peggy leaves to W.H.S. three more years of teaching Mahoneys. A list of his songs is left to next year's Ski Club by Mike Lane. Gayle and Syd leave their doorknobs to Smitty, wherever she may be.

"I wonder what they did like in this school," says Mr. McMahon, "The lunches? The subjects? The teachers" Shuddering, he continues his rummaging.

Glee Corsetti leaves to her brother, Danny, the lunches she didn't eat. Susan Brown leaves a new canoe paddle to the ladies in the kitchen to stir the rice with, along with six banana skins to the teacher aides. Dotty Castaldo, Mary Alice Branzetti, and Susan Brown leave the cafeteria ladies twenty-five bananas with the hope that some underclassman dares to break their record. The First Lunch Gang leaves "Their Table."

Mr. McMahon now comes across typewriter ribbon, math books, gym and sports equipment, and other assorted prizes. There are all the five and ten minute timings left by Linda Hodgdon to junior girls struggling to make their quota. Marion leaves all the ten and five minute timings she didn't get to all Type II and Type III students. Lyn, Joycie, Linda and Ralph leave three periods of sitting in 208A to anyone who can stand it.

Janis Jaquith leaves four fruitless years of algebra to anyone who can add. Susan Laughton leaves a bottle of aspirin for all students who bothered to study for algebra tests but failed. Danny Sullivan leaves one slightly used algebra book to Mr. Jones. Patty Sullivan and Debbi Dayton leave Miss Faro as "Ma" for next year's Math League. A pack of gum and a scraper are left to Mr. Kelley by Pat Sullivan and Lorraine Kenney, who also leave their French marks to poor unsuspecting juniors.

To anybody who knows Mr. Malay, Ellen Balsar leaves all the days she had to stay after for him, and the door to the cafe that Susan Laughton and she opened on him and nearly killed him with. Bev Jacobs leaves her smile and cheerfulness to R.M.M.

Further searching reveals that Ann Hyland leaves a jar of Marshmallow Fluff and a box of HiHo crackers to Mrs. Kanchuga and Miss David; the Class of '70 leaves a long tie to Mr. Garrett; Kathi leaves ten Booster Buttons to Miss McCarthy; Joyce McMillan, Joannie Cushing, Patti Griffin, Susan Brown, and Dotty Castaldo all leave Miss McCarthy and Miss Dadoly.

Piled in a megaphone, Mr. McMahon finds Lesley Sarchione's cheering uniform, left to Chickie. The cheerleaders leave the pyramid to anyone with a strong back. "Uglies" numbers 1, 5, 6, and 9 leave their positions to be filled by next year's squad. Robyn Rees leaves her wig to the Burlington football field. Joyce MacIver leaves the many funfilled days of cheerleading to her sister, Sally.

Peggy Mahoney leaves the painsaking hours of majorette practice to Joan Cuoco, along with the trouble and joy of organizing activities for her class.

Maureen Kelley leaves her sisters a year with Mr. D. Sydna, Janny, and Gayle leave their "crudeness, disrespect, and ignorance" to Uncle Gino.

Jane Swisher leaves her "perfect attendance" record to her brother, Bobby, along with a year's subscription to the Pewter Pot Breakfast Club. Jan McLean's perfect attendance record is left to her brother, Frank. Ann, Jan, and Sheila leave their perfect attendance to Marcia. Jan, Sheila, and Maureen leave their reservations at HoJo's for breakfast to anyone who wants to fill them. Many mornings at Howard Johnson's and many days at Glee's are left to Joan Cuoco and Donna Brewster by Patti Griffin. Luckily, Jane Swisher and Lesley Sarchione leave, to anyone who needs it, their book of 1001 Tardiness Excuses.

Mr. McMahon gets really worried when he digs deeper into the box. 180 skip days are left by Linda Hodgdon to her sister, Patti. Peggy Mahoney leaves to her brother, Michael, all the skip days she never took. Sheila, Jan and Maureen leave Marcia and Donna an open invitation to go to the beach any day. The right to proclaim every sunny day an official skip-to-the-beach day is left to Joannie, Marie and Donna by Glee Corsetti. A note of hope, though, because Sheila Croswell leaves to her brother, Wayne, her vacant homeroom seat, and Joyce and Bruce regretfully leave homeroom seats beside each other for six years.

Finally, only three things are left in the box. There is a bottle of aspirin for all the headaches Linda Carrasco got from Wilmington High that she leaves to Maureen. Patti Griffin, Glee Corsetti, and Peggy Mahoney leave all the apathy they felt at W.H.S. to underclassmen. Susan Brown leaves a lot of hope that the students next year accomplish a lot more than allowing the girls and boys to sit together at lunch.

Despite the many sighs of relief, the Class of '70 will never die; it will just fade away to blend with the past classes in that final resting place—the big homeroom in the sky.

ELIZABETH WELLS

HISTORY

We were brought together as a class in the fall of 1964 at the North Intermediate School. Two years were spent there; memories included our Principal, Mr. DeLuca and writing papers about life inside a ping-pong ball.

In 1966 as big kids, we entered the High School. Freshman year we endured a Freshman-Senior War which has never been matched.

Sophomore year we were allowed to run a dance, which turned out to be a big flop. Our class broke a two year tradition on "Sophomore Day", a day in which the students are allowed to dress in accordance with a theme voted on by the class. The administration said it was not a normal thing, just something that was permitted for the two previous classes, not to be permitted every year.

Junior year brought a change in class advisor and a change in class attitude. In the fall we ran a Battle of the Bands; a dance where two bands play but only one is paid. In the spring we ran the Junior Variety Show; it was the one thing we did as a class that was a success. Clique prejudices were forgotten; everyone worked hard together, and it was fun. I don't know about anyone else, but the Monday after the show, I was sorry to be going home instead of to rehearsal. The week of the hardest rehearsals was also Junior Week. In Junior Week as for Sophomore Day our class was held down by the administration, we were told that our "week" was to be cut to three days. The reason given was the number of school days lost during February because of snow. We got around losing the two days by having Dress-up Day and Blue Day. Two weeks before this was the Junior Prom, held at the Hillview Country Club in North Reading. Everyone looked nice; it was strange to see our class so dressed up. In June the class attempted a barbeque and block dance. As luck would have it, it rained. The dance was transfered to the gym so it was not a total loss.

Senior year has passed quickly. The dress code was finally abolished which made school less formal. We almost broke another tradition by not having a Senior Class Play for lack of a director. Finally Miss Waitkevich and Mrs. Long agreed to direct the play. We chose "Up the Down Staircase", a farce about high schools. We held a big candy sale to earn money for the class trip to New York City. This year the trip to visit the United Nations lasted three days instead of two. We visited television shows, the Bronx Zoo, Greenwich Village, the U. N., N.B.C. studios, Fillmore East and went on a three hour boat ride around Manhattan Island which was really quite interesting. We did not have too much free time, but we managed.

Looking back over the last few years, the years which we've supposedly grown into adults, a lot has happened. Our country has been torn internally by a variety of conflicts—the race conflict and the Vietnam conflict. The society which we enter has many problems which will not be solved by running from them. What we've got to do is work constructively. Making this country a better place for our generation and generations to come.
